I used to wait for Fred to come home and I'd shoot up the shops and you'd laugh. We used to line up and [laughs] I was lining up one day and the butcher woman called me in because I was out and I'd got a kid. I went in and stood aside cos if – if you were expecting you didn't line up you got in – inside and she'd serve you and I stood at the counter and held me booklet out and a woman stood on the side of me and she'd put herself in front of me. So she said, 'Oh, I didn't expect you – think you were going to have a baby'. So I said, 'Well, what do you blinkin think it is? A pimple?' [laughs] and everybody laughed.
