I think my memories starts being in the corrugated dug-out in 11 Christchurch Way, Greenwich and I can still hear the bombs and the guns from this Big Bertha, you know, the ship that was laying off there and see the search lights in the sky picking up the aircraft and I can still see my father and my grandfather sitting on the garden fence with their tin helmets on and my mum and my Gran say, 'Come in the dug-out' but they couldn't because there wasn't enough room [laughs]. I had no brothers or sisters but there was just me mother and fath — and me grandmother in the dug-out and the other two were outside.
